

Job Description

Guinness World Records is looking for a media lawyer to join its legal team in London.

Reporting to the Senior Legal Counsel, this role will provide legal advice and support to Guinness World Records' London and New York offices on a range of commercial, IP and compliance matters across the full scope of this varied entertainment business.

This role's responsibilities include:

- Drafting, negotiating and reviewing a variety of agreements relating to GWR's commercial clients, publishing, TV production, trademark and copyright licensing, and live events;
- Providing advice on general legal matters, including intellectual property, data privacy, commercial and contract law;
- Assist with maintaining trademark registrations;
- Pursuing trademark and copyright infringements;
- Managing documents and information on internal systems; and
- Assisting with implementation of company policies and procedures.

The ideal candidate will be an English law-qualified lawyer and have the following skills and attributes:

- 2-3 years' PQE.
- Good drafting and negotiating skills.
- Experience of commercial contracts, copyright and trademarks.
- Knowledge of and interest in the digital, creative and media sectors.
- A self-starter able to juggle competing demands.
- Proactive, enthusiastic, curious and a team player.

This is a key role in this fascinating and unique business and will give the successful candidate the opportunity to learn and get involved with all aspects of a modern entertainment company.